The CFC provides a range of financial and technical instruments in support of business activities contributing to commodity sector development in Developing Countries. Examples include agriculture, commodity value addition and trade, minerals and metals. Besides generating a viable financial return, eligible activities should also deliver a measurable social and environmental impact.  The support is offered mainly through loans, including financing of equipment's and meeting needs for working capital. The CFC seeks applications of projects that have reached a state of economic, social and environmental sustainability. Project proposals that incorporate innovative solutions for the commodity sector (e.g. new agritech applications, increase availability of renewable and affordable energy, expanding environmental service) are especially expected to be submitted.
Conservation Leadership Programme (CLP) Future Conservationist Award	https://www.conservationleadershipprogramme.org/grants/	USD 15,000	Future Conservationists Award Funding will support early-career conservationists to conduct scientific research, encourage and promote pro-conservation attitudes and deliver tangible results to better conserve and manage the natural world. In this funding round, a set of CLP Future Conservationist Awards, each worth $15,000, will be granted to teams of early-careers conservationists to conduct projects on target species that are listed as Data Deficient, Vulnerable, Endangered or Critically Endangered on the IUCN Red List.
Conservation, Food, and Health Foundation	http://cfhfoundation.grantsmanagement08.com/	The average grant is approximately $20,000. Grants exceeding $30,000 are rarely awarded.	The Conservation, Food and Health Foundation seeks to protect natural resources, improve the production and distribution of food, and promote public health in Asia, Africa, Latin America, and the Middle East. The foundation helps build the capacity of organizations and coalitions with grants that support research or improve the learning and generation of local solutions to complex problems. This award program was inspired by the work of EarthRanger, a protected area management software developed by a team of technologists to support protected area managers, ecologists, and wildlife biologists in staying informed and making operational decisions for conservation. Any organization, protected area and government entity working in conservation will be eligible to apply for this grant. Individuals can apply on behalf of their organization.
Earthwatch	https://earthwatch.org/		CITIZEN'S SCIENCE Earthwatch supports scientific field projects in topics of ecosystems and biodiversity in several world regions. Applicants to lead these field projects can be of any nationality. Earthwatch invites projects that have a strong rationale for using non-specialists (volunteers) to aid with data collection, scientific observation, or other research tasks. Program themes include (among others) collaborative ecological research; ecological restoration; global conservation priorities; ocean ecosystems; and sustainable agriculture and forestry. Funds project expenses rather than salaries. Long proposal process.

Fresno Chaffee Zoo supports critical research projects that protect and preserve wildlife and wild places around the world. Since 2006, the Fresno Chaffee Zoo Wildlife Conservation Fund has worked with dozens of individuals and organizations to further research, expand conservation impact, share knowledge, and engage local communities.
Future for Nature Awards	https://futurefornature.org/		Each year Future For Nature awards 3 young, talented, and ambitious nature conservationists through the Future For Nature Awards. The award should be used for a conservation project of the winner's own choice, initiated and implemented by him/her. The focus of the project must be on conservation of species. The project can involve a component of (fundamental) research, but this should not be the main focus. The main focus should be conservation action with a practical impact.

By being a member of the AI for Earth grantee community, you also have access to additional resources – technical advice and support, online Azure training materials, and invitations to the AI for Earth Summit for networking and education opportunities. Focus Areas Climate: The changing climate threatens human health, infrastructure, and natural systems. AI can give people more accurate climate predictions to help reduce the potential impacts. Agriculture: By 2050, farmers must produce more food, on less arable land, and with less environmental impact to feed the world's increasing population. AI can help people monitor the health of farms in real time. Biodiversity: Species are going extinct at an alarming rate. AI can help accelerate the discovery, monitoring, and protection of biodiversity across our planet. Water: In the next two decades, demand for fresh water is predicted to dramatically outpace supply. AI can help people model Earth's water supply to help them conserve and protect fresh water.

Sophie Danforth Conservation Biology Fund	https://www.rwpzoo.org/danforth-conservation-grants		The Sophie Danforth Conservation Biology Fund (SDCBF), established by Roger Williams Park Zoo and the Rhode Island Zoological Society in 1989, supports conservation programs that protect threatened wildlife and habitats worldwide. Field studies and other projects that demonstrate a multi-disciplinary approach to biodiversity and ecosystem conservation, and projects that involve in-country collaborators receive the highest funding priority. Environmental education programs, development of techniques that can be used in a natural environment, and captive propagation programs that stress an integrative approach to conservation are also appropriate. Projects must directly affect biological conservation. Contact Louis Perrotti, director of conservation programs at Lperrotti@rwpzoo.org or call (401) 785-3510 ext. 335.

Whitley Fund for Nature	https://whitleyaward.org/apply-for-conservation-funding/how-to-apply/	£40,000	The Whitley Fund for Nature (WFN) offers the Whitley Awards to outstanding biodiversity conservation leaders in developing countries around the world. The awards are both an international prize and a form of project funding. The program is open to applicants from grassroots conservation NGOs incorporated in developing countries that are rich in biodiversity. WFN invites applications for projects that conserve freshwater and marine ecosystems in addition to those that conserve terrestrial biodiversity.
Wildlife Acoustics	https://www.wildlifeacoustics.com/grant-program	up to $5,000	Wildlife Acoustics Scientific Product Grants Program  Wildlife Acoustics has established a grant program to support bioacoustics research efforts. Every quarter, Wildlife Acoustics will be giving away up to $5,000 of product to grant recipients worldwide.  Eligibility Criteria US or Non-US government agencies are not eligible for the program. Project makes significant use of bioacoustics for data collection and/or analysis. The work advances scientific knowledge and contributes to long-term conservation. The grant award would have significant impact on the success of the project. The grant request provides adequate information to evaluate the project, including detailed expected outcomes and use of bioacoustics data to support those outcomes. The project should begin in the year that the application is submitted, or in the following year if the application is submitted in the off-season.
